JUNE 12, 2014

Sam Moyer: 'More Weight' (through June 22) Heavier here means more serious, ambitious and altogether better. That is exemplified by two series of paintings, which question (even mock) painterliness without abandoning it, and a wonderful installation that — perhaps in something of a feminist riposte — redistributes the poundage of Richard Serra's massive "Delineator" (1974-75). The lower steel plate is replaced by a thick slab of veined white marble, the upper one by a diaphanous painting canopy. A magical pavilion, exhilarating to walk on, results.
