

New York Times
Art Listings
December 9, 2005

ZARINA Zarina Hashmi was a nomad long before a peripatetic way of life became art-world fashion. Now in her 60's, she was born in India, has spent long stretches of time in other parts of Asia, and in Europe and Latin America. Even after making New York City her base in the 1970's, she kept on the move, and the semiabstract, minimalist art in this beautiful show is about self-location, past and present, in the face of constant change. Bose Pacia, 508 West 26th Street, 11th floor, Chelsea, (212) 989-7074, through Dec. 23. (Cotter)