"Generation 1.5" is an expression describing teenage immigrants. The eight artists in the Queens Museum's show, all of them 1.5ers, provide critical perspective on both their new surroundings and cultures of origin. Salvage Research Soul Training, the Jamaica-born Nari Ward's sculpture of anchored wheelchairs ascending toward the sky, suggests an uneasy transition between two states. RISD grad Seher Shah was born in Pakistan and exhibits six drawings from the series Jihad Pop Progression: large-scale, graphic works full of potent symbols. Lee Mingwei soothes his homesickness with a four-channel sound-and-light installation of a piece by famed turn-of-the-century composer Antonin Dvorak, written during his trip to America. (JW)
