

The New York Times

Art & Design

FRIDAY, JULY 7, 2007

‘YOU ALWAYS MOVE IN REVERSE’ Bjarne Melgaard, who had a memorably assaultive solo at the late, lamented Alleged Gallery in Chelsea a few years ago, says that he conceived this group show as a swipe at the “teenage rebellion thing.” He enlisted some good artists to press his point, among them Jason Dodge, Richard Hawkins, Jeff Ono and B. Wutz. But the occasion is mainly notable for marking the return of Lydia Lunch, a true-blue rebel, whose one-time-only performance in the gallery surely outshone the photographs by her in the show. Leo Koenig, 545 West 23rd Street, Chelsea, (212) 334-9255, leokoenig.com, closes on Tuesday. (Cotter)